

Ex-CIA Head to Discuss U.S. Security

Stansfield Turner, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, will discuss "Worldwide Challenges to the U.S. Security" on Nov. 15 at the annual Dean's Circle Dinner of the Southwestern University School of Law at the Regency Club.

During the Carter Administration, Turner headed both the Intelligence Community (the nation's foreign intelligence agencies) and the Central Intelligence Agency. He is a retired Navy admiral and is now a writer, lecturer and consultant.

The Dean's Circle is a fund-raising group that supports high-priority areas at Southwestern.